

Strategies for High School Students with Disabilities in the General Education Curriculum

Responding effectively to students who consistently fail to meet academic and/or behavioral expectations is at the heart of a quality education. Many students with disabilities can succeed in the general education curriculum if they receive needed services and supports.

Strategies for High School Students with Disabilities in the General Education Curriculum is designed to assist high schools and their districts in improving the performance of special education students. It describes the highlights support systems that districts need to put in place to sustain improvements over the long run.

Content includes:

- schoolwide issues for administrators and strategies for classroom teachers
- a variety of co-teaching approaches
- case studies from three high schools that demonstrate successful approaches to educating students to high standards
- systems that work
- an action plan for an intervention system
- how to create an effective intervention system
